2 ETF Areas to Gain From Michael Bloomberg's Campaign

U.S. presidential election is in November and candidates are bucking up for the campaign. Democratic presidential hopeful Michael Bloomberg has already spent $217 million on television and digital advertising. Wall Street Journal noted that total Bloomberg spending is about ...

Clean Energy to Shine

Most democrat candidates including Bloomberg are pledging to end the fossil-fuel era, going completely against President's Trump's call. Bloomberg's latest climate plans demand new buildings to produce zero carbon emissions by 2025.

To turn the U.S. economy carbon-free, Bloomberg seeks to control pollution from cars and trucks, the nation's key source of carbon emissions. His proposal calls for spending $250 billion on clean energy research and development by 2025.

Needless to say, clean energy ETFs like Invesco WilderHill Clean Energy ETF PBW, ..., ... and ... should be clear winners (read: Best ETFs to Combat Climate Change).
